FORMER TONOPAH RESIDENTS ENTER THE DIVORCE COURTS

Oscar Turner, Promoter of Famous Tonopah Mine, Seeks Legal Separation From His Domestic Partner—Mrs. Turner Appears to Be Willing.

The White Pine News of Sunday says:

"The Oscar Turners are about to air their family troubles in the courts. One day we hear that Mrs. Turner is about to apply for a separation on the grounds that Mr. Turner has found a soul mate; and the following day it comes to light that Mr. Turner has, in the vernacular of the divorce court, 'beat her to it.' Mr. Turner, of course, is silent in his complaint as to the existence of an affinity, while Mrs. Turner in New York, declares that he has confessed this much to her.

"Judge Dodge, formerly attorney for the Ely Central Copper company, slipped in here a week or more ago, and made inquiry for Attorney Sam Belford. To interrogations as to the object of his visit, all the information volunteered by the astute lawyer was that his visit was in no way connected with the affairs of the Ely Central. This was readily believed, for his connection with that company had long since ceased. Mr. Belford was not in the district at the time of the judge's arrival; and so Mr. Dodge filed the complaint for Al-vice for O. A. Turner all by himself, and gave instructions that it be placed on the secret file. Then the foxy jurist hastened back to New York.

"Oscar A. Turner is a national figure in the world of mining, whose assets one time were calculated in the neighborhood of $3,000,000. He has been known for many years as a prodigal spender, and a mining man who was always willing to take a chance. He is well known in this district as the former owner of the Ely Central company, and the present controlling owner in the Tungsten mines at Hub. He is a man who goes in for big things, and has been a promoter of considerable note. He has the financial nerve of a Pierpont Morgan, and he is the man who promoted the Tonopah Mining company which has turned out to be one of the richest silver-gold mines in the state of Nevada.

"When Jim Butler, in search of his stray burro, found the 'Washoe canary' on the top of Mt. Quind, grazing on ore that went $600 and $700 to the ton, Oscar Turner was mining in Grass Valley, California. It was not only hard rock mining, but it was hard luck mining, for the output was nothing but outlay. The wonders of the Mizpah mine, as the Tonopah was called, reached Grass Valley, and Mr. Turner was luring enough to pay his expenses to the new Eldorado. Set out for Tonopah. He met Jim Butler, saw the leasers taking out the ore, and immediately asked Jim what he wanted for his mine. The Father of Tonopah was quite a wag in his way, and he blustered a bit and spit a bit, and talked a great deal with his tongue and his eyes, and said that he would not consider any proposition but cash.

"Oscar A. Turner, with hardly a bean with which to bless himself, drily told Jim that he did business only on a cash basis, and Butler fell for an option on the great mine, and Mr. Turner got mighty busy with his people in Philadelphia, with the result that an expert was sent out, and for deal was closed. Turner was made a millionaire through the transaction. His share was in the neighborhood of 200,000 shares of stock in the new corporation which was called the Tonopah Mining company. Some of the stock he sold in the neighborhood of $20 a share, the stock having reached $4 a share on the market.

His march into the millions reads like a chapter from the Arabian Nights. After the Tonopah deal, his name was one to conjure with in all ends of the mining game, and he got into some of the best mining propositions in the country, the money coming rolling into him. His residence was New York, and there he got the copper craze. The Phiby brothers were in this district at the time, and they knew him from Tonopah, where they aided him in getting his famous option. At the time of the boom here they again got in touch with him, and after assembling the properties known as the Ely Central, induced him to buy the ground. He put $360,000 into that deal, and started to operate the property with churn drills.

"Then George Graham Rice, promoter, came into the field, looking for a copper property. He stopped over here on his way to Bingham, but never went to Bingham. He saw the possibilities of Ely Central as a promotion, and opened a deal with Joe Phiby which was concluded in New York with two of the Phibys and Turner. Before the smash came in Ely Central, the former owners received all their money from Rice, and it was a cheerful sum. Meantime Mr. Turner was taking flyers in the coppers of Arizona and had annexed other properties, some of them gold propositions. How much he is worth at the present time, if he were to realize on his holdings, is not now known, but evidently Mrs. Turner, who has been here with him on two occasions, thinks there is plenty to make her comfortable for life, and leave enough for him to go on promoting and mining.

"The couple, according to the complaint lodged with the county clerk, have been married 22 years, and have two boys, now on the verge of manhood. These two boys were here with their father, and he was princely in his attitude toward them. In his complaint, Mr. Turner declares that Mrs. Turner has been cruel in her demeanor to him, and that she has occasioned him the loss of much money. She has refused to have a home, depriving him of family comforts, and increasing the household expenses by living at expensive hotels. He has been humiliated by her conduct, according to his complaint, and his pecuniary loss on her account has been irreparable. Mrs. Turner, in her declaration that a separation was to occur, seemed quite content with conditions; but as to what she will do when served with divorce papers, remains to be seen. Mr. Turner claims a residence here, and it is possible that the differences of the couple will be thrashed out in the district court."

HUMBOLDT RIVER WATER PROJECT

Government engineers have surveyed the land and made measurements of the water flow of the Humboldt river, the principal stream in the state. It is understood that recent tests made by the government engineers show that there is water enough going to waste each year that if properly handled would raise crops sufficient to support at least a million more population than Nevada has at the present. The Humboldt river traverses the state for a distance of nearly 400 miles, and during the spring of the year an immense volume of water passes down the stream to the Humboldt sink, where it forms a large lake and finally evaporates or sinks into the ground. The Humboldt river at this time of the year is a comparatively small stream, but in the early spring the river spreads its banks at least 100 times its natural width, and under the present system of irrigation this water is allowed to go to waste, as there are no means of controlling it.
